A History of The European Space Agency
1958 -1987

This study traces the history of the European collaborative space programme from its beginnings in the late 1950s, to the creation of a single space agency in the early 1970s and up to the late 1980s, in the light of its main actors and policies. It provides valuable insights into the complex decision making processes in a unique multinational organisation, which often involve a delicate balancing act between the various interests of the member states.
